A HEARST NEWSPAPER FOR HONOLULU WITH R. B. KIDD EDITOR

The interest in the coming National campaign has started with a bound since the return of the delegates from the Democratic National convention. A bet was made yesterday between two well-known business men of the city which has created a great deal of talk. The bet was of $5,000 to $1,000 that Taft would beat Bryan on the popular vote. The man on the Taft end offered ten to one on the same proposition the day before and could not get a taker. He states that he will take more money at five to one if he can get it and also is willing to give odds of two to one that Taft will carry five of the thirteen states of the solid South.

The reports from Denver bring back good news from Beverly Kidd. He appeared at the convention each day with a swagger stick and carrying a light overcoat on his arm. He is said to be the Bert Peterson of the Chicago newspapermen. He appears to be very well satisfied but says that he will get back to Hawaii some time and start a newspaper for Hearst.

Harber of the United States first class battleship Maine, recently arrived here from San Francisco via Honolulu and Guam in company with the battleship Alabama, has succeeded Rear Admiral Joseph N. The vessels of the third squadron are the protected cruisers Chattanooga, Cleveland, Denver and Galveston, and the gunboats Rainbow, Callao, Concord, Helena, Samar, Villalobos and Wilmington. The last six named are at present in Chinese waters. The Galveston is at Cavite, the Denver at Wosung, the Cleveland at Wosung and the Chattanooga at Cavite. LAUKEA SAYS "SCAT" TO ALL POLITICIANS

UTOPIA IN THE GRIM BUILDING ON MERCHANT STREET—THE HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT TALKS OF THE MILLENNIAL ADMINISTRATION HE HAS DECIDED TO HAVE, AS FAR AS FILTHY POLITICS IS CONCERNED

Revelling in the enjoyment of a unique sensation, that of endeavoring to conduct a police department wholly without politics, County Sheriff Curtis Laukea this morning let drop from his lips some new thought ideas on community discipline.

"A man can't serve the people and the politicians, too," said he, "and I have no doubt that I will be condemned by politicians, but I'm really trying to show the people that I'm in office to work for them. It is a difficult proposition."

"You do not know how hard it is. I know," and the Sheriff sighed with that rising inflection so well known to those who have the pleasure of interviewing him.

"I know," he continued, "because I have fought for office several times with the power of the police department against me."

"Don't you think," he questioned, "that it is possible to conduct a police department without politics?"

The interrogator made a noise like keeping silence.

"Well, I think it's possible," said Curtis, "and I'm going to do it."

"I have no doubt that there are a lot of people who would like to see the Board of Supervisors make all the appointments—then I suppose we would have a Republican force."

"Careful, Sheriff, remember you're not in politics!"

"No, he's a democrat!" said another scribe, entering.

"Not that I care," continued the Sheriff, "but there is satisfaction in knowing that you are doing your best and I'm convinced that no matter if I do make a lot of political enemies, I shall have made the people my friends and in days to come they will be able to say there was one man who tried to cut politics out of the police."

There was a silence for a moment.

"Now take this matter of the discharge of Apana and the criticism of Kalakalea," recommenced Laukea.

"I have a lot of letters from various people specifying certain things which lost Apana his confidence in him and, as to Kalakalea, his system is right. It is for him to know where the work of raiding is to be done and if he sends his men out on one job he does not expect them to deliberately avoid it and go off on another matter. Apana's unsupported word against Kalakalea has brought no doubt in mind in regard to Kalakalea's integrity."

"What am I going to do? Well, I've said already that I was not looking for re-election."

"Sometimes I feel I'd like to rusticate. But won't you believe me when I say that I'm not thinking about what is to come, but rather am I endeavoring to honestly, fearlessly and without consideration of politics, administer the affairs of this office, according to my oath and according to my conscience."

THE STORY OF THE YACHT RACE

SPLENDID HANDLING OF THE LURLINE BY COMMODORE SINCLAIR
—THE LITTLE KAMEHAMEHA STRUCK CALMS JUST AS SHE WAS HOPING TO SLIDE IN AHEAD—SOCIAL GATHERINGS IN HILO.

(By DANIEL LOGAN.)

HILO, July 30.—Commodore Sinclair has proved his yacht Lurline to be the best in the Pacific, for the short as well as the long of it.

At 2:25:30 official time, from Charlie Wider at this as well as the other end, the Lurline crossed the finish line in Hilo bay, first in the yacht race started at Honolulu on the 28th inst. at 10 a. m.

It was the Lurline's race from noon yesterday, if not sunset the evening before. The only doubtful period, with those on board the Lurline, between the times just mentioned was when the saucy little sloop Kamehameha popped out from inshore somewhere Tuesday forenoon and came abreast of the Los Angeles boat, about 200 yards away, precisely at noon and was not left distinctly in the rear until four o'clock or thereabouts.

The Lurline won the race by her facility of pointing high to windward, by taking long sea reaches far off shore, by her innate speed and, last if not chiefly, by having in command, in the person of her owner, Commodore Sinclair, a yachtsman who knew everything that was in his boat and everything that could be got out of her. Along with the last reason must also be taken the fact that Mr. Poole, mate of the Lurline, is a thorough seaman

Cooper Still Has Confidence In Hawaii

"I believe the Hawaii to be a first class boat in every way, and if several alterations are made she will be able to hold her own with any yacht of her class and cost."

The above and the following statements were made this morning by Commodore H. E. Cooper, who arrived on the Mauna Kea from Hilo after he had sailed the Hawaii in the Honolulu-Hilo race.

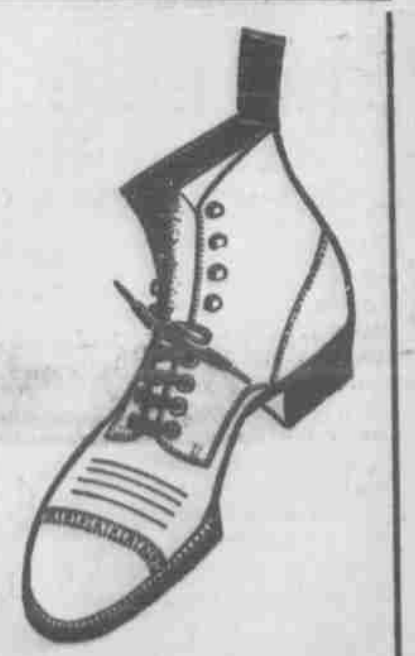

"The race was one of the most exciting events in my life, and the only regret that I have is that she did not arrive in Hilo first. I did everything that I could to win, but the winds did not blow strong enough for me to have the honor of sailing a winning race. The Hawaii in my estimation is a first class boat, and after some important changes are made she will be a wonder."

"One thing that in my opinion should
